CALL FOR PAPERS

The Departments of Sociology and Development Studies at St. Augustine University of Tanzania are pleased to announce the launching of a journal in social sciences entitled Journal of Sociology and Development. We welcome original manuscripts in the disciplines of sociology and development studies for the first volume to be published in December 2016. Please read below to find information about manuscript requirements and modes of submission. Thank you.

About the journal

The Journal of Sociology and Development (JSD) is a peer-reviewed journal that publishes scholarly, original, empirical research and theoretical contributions in the fields of sociology and development studies with a multidisciplinary and global perspective with a focus on the African continent.

The vision of the journal is to stimulate scientific communication towards the understanding of the continent departing from a plurality of perspectives. With most social sciences journals being produced and published outside Africa, JSD is envisaged as a forum for the growing number of academics working within the social sciences disciplines in Africa. International contributions are welcome and crucial in achieving the JSD vision. JSD welcomes contributions in all branches of sociology as well as contributions in the field of development studies that take a marked socio-economic, political and cultural perspective on questions related to societal development and policy, governance, resource management and similar topics.

Manuscripts requirements and author guidelines

Manuscripts must be original (not published elsewhere) and must not be in consideration for publication in other journals. Drafts should be sent as a Microsoft Word file directly to the editor to the email address mentioned below. Manuscripts need to be A-4 typed, 12 font size, Times New Roman, double-spaced with 1 inch margin at both sides, top and bottom. An abstract of around 200 words needs to follow the title of the manuscript as well as five keywords. Sections should include: introduction, literature review, research question and objectives, data and methods, findings and discussion, conclusions, references and appendices/annexes if needed. Subheadings within sections may be used for clarity; other outlines are within the realm of possibility as well, for example in case of theoretical submissions. Acknowledgments may be included before references with funding details, where applicable. Authors need to follow the 6th edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (APA) referencing style. Article length should be about 8,000 words excluding references and appendices/annexes but including footnotes and textboxes. Tables and figures need to have captions and should be of an acceptable resolution; they need to be included within the text and numbered consecutively.

Peer-review

The journal uses double-blind reviewing. Manuscripts will be sent to two anonymous reviewers who will return their comments to the editor. In order to enable the double-blind peer-review process, authors need to make their manuscripts anonymous. Some tips to do that are: (a) not add headers and footers with authors' names, (b) refer to authors' own work in the third person, (c) avoid or minimise self-citation, (d) remove any other identifier. Authors will be able to reinsert identifiers after the manuscript has been accepted, if they wish to do so.

After submission

Reviewers will be asked to return their comments within two months from the date on which they received the manuscript. A final decision will be taken within three months from the date of first submission. Once reviewers have returned comments, the possible outcomes are (a) accept without revisions, (b) minor revisions, (c) resubmit-with-revisions, or (d) rejection. For the cases of minor revisions and resubmit-with-revisions, authors will have four weeks to carry out the revisions asked by the reviewers; however, in case of minor revisions, manuscripts will not go through a new review process (as for the case of resubmit-with-revisions) and the editor can decide to accept the manuscripts provided that reviewers are satisfied with the revisions. In all cases, the final decision on the outcome of a manuscript will be the editor's and it will be final.
